MEET Lyndsey Roberts

BRINGING PEOPLE TOGETHER

By Meeka Cook | Photos By Lyndsey Roberts Weddings & Photography

For Lyndsey Roberts, South Daytona and Port Orange aren't simply places where she lives and works. This is home; the community where she grew up, where her parents put down roots more than 50 years ago, where she is raising her own children. It is also where she has spent much of her adult life creating businesses and spaces that bring people together.

"I'm a local girl through and through," says Lyndsey. "My parents, Frank and Suzanne Roberts, have been in this area since the 1970s. I started at Atlantic High School when it first opened, graduated from Mainland High School, and then went to UCF in Orlando."

Today, Lyndsey and her husband, Jason, live in the Palm Grove neighborhood of South Daytona with their children, Anthony, 17, and Layla, 7. But their story began long before either could have imagined the life they would eventually share.

"We were married at Twin Oak Garden, our wedding venue here in South Daytona. We actually go way back: we were in preschool and kindergarten together at Warner Christian Academy. Years later we crossed paths at a wedding where he was a groomsman, and then we met again online."

For someone who has spent much of her career creating and photographing weddings and celebrations for other people, Lyndsey's favorite memories with Jason are simple: "Dancing in the kitchen while we make dinner."

FAMILY LIFE

Currently, much of family life revolves around Anthony and Layla. Anthony grew up playing baseball and, when he was younger, soccer. At 17, he now sometimes lends a hand in the kitchen at Coffee Therapy, the coffee shop Lyndsey opened two years ago.

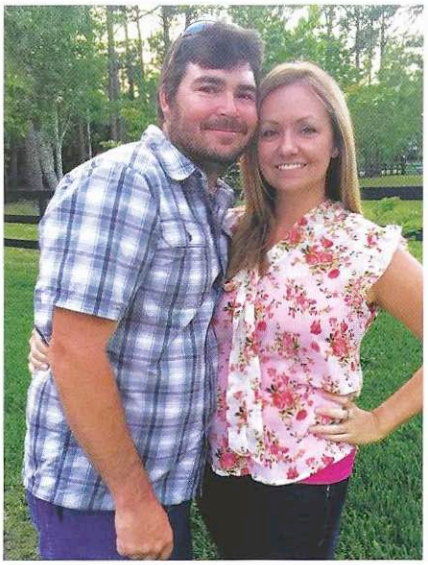

Layla plays soccer in both South Daytona and Port Orange, and Lyndsey coaches her teams. "I coach Layla's soccer teams in South Daytona and Port Orange, and we love getting outside together — wildflower picking is a favorite," she says.

Mother and daughter also share a love of Disney, where their season passes and occasional resort stays offer a chance to get away. "Those trips with Layla are a treasured reset and less about rushing the parks and more about uninterrupted time together."

At home, the family includes Bailey, a rescue Boxer; fellow Boxers Lilly and Hooch; Levi, a Pomsky; and Figaro, or Figgy, a kitten who appeared in their backyard on Christmas Eve.

"Bailey still likes to think she runs the house," says Lyndsey, "and Figgy joining the pack on Christmas Eve has been entertainment and chaos in equal measure."

A FAMILY OF GRIT AND CREATIVITY

Lyndsey describes her family as "a mix of grit and creativity," qualities that have clearly carried into her own life.

Her father, Frank, owned Roberts RV Sales in Port Orange and also had a creative side.

"My dad played big-band swing music when I was growing up and eventually became a DJ, doing a lot of the local car shows," Lyndsey says.

He also played a pivotal role in his daughter's career.

"My father, who owned Roberts RV Sales in Port Orange, is the one who got me into doing weddings as a photographer, and that is how I found my way into this industry."

That was more than 25 years ago. Photography led to linen rentals and event planning and eventually to Twin Oak Garden, her South Daytona wedding venue, Lyndsey Roberts Bridal Collection and her own Bella Luso Bridal gown line.

"My businesses really grew from one another," she says. "From photography I added linen rentals and event planning, then opened my own wedding venue, Twin Oak Garden, and Lyndsey Roberts Bridal Collection."

Photography, however, remains an important part of Lyndsey's life. Port Orange Neighbors readers may recognize her name because she has been behind the camera for many of the families featured on these pages.

"I love building things that bring people together," she says, "whether that's a morning cup of coffee, a Bella Luso gown, or a day at Twin Oak Garden."

FINDING HOME IN PALM GROVE

The Roberts family lives on Pineapple Road in Palm Grove, a neighborhood they chose for its established homes, mature trees, larger lots, and proximity to the beach, river, and everyday necessities.

"We chose this area because it feels like a real neighborhood," Lyndsey says. "It's close enough to the beach, the river, schools, and everyday errands without losing that quieter residential feel. South Daytona has been a good place to put down roots and grow our businesses."

But what she appreciates most is the sense of community.

"I love that Palm Grove still feels like a community. People wave. You see the same faces at the shops and around town. It's close to everything that makes this stretch of Volusia special: the water, the beach, local restaurants and small businesses, but it still has that 'you can breathe here' feeling. I'm proud to live and work in South Daytona."

Between soccer, church, businesses and community events, the family stays connected throughout South Daytona and Port Orange. "The shop, the trailer, the boutique, the soccer field and our church's Walk Through Bethlehem are how we stay connected," Lyndsey says.

They often show up at local events with their refurbished horse-trailer food truck. Their involvement has included Port Orange Family Day, Fourth of July festivities at Port Orange City Center, the Port Orange boat-launch ribbon cutting, recreation center events, and the Out of the Darkness walk.

CREATING A PLACE TO GATHER

Two years ago, Lyndsey added something new to her already busy life when she opened Coffee Therapy on Anastasia Drive in South Daytona.

"I opened Coffee Therapy to give our small town a place to hang out, study, and work from," she says. In many ways, the coffee shop fits with everything else Lyndsey has created: another place for people to come together. It also gives her another outlet for creativity that doesn't seem to switch off when the workday ends.

"Most of my hobbies look a lot like my work. Be it designing spaces, creating content, planning events, or making things look and feel special," she says. "I customize cups and clothing for Coffee Therapy and make homemade candles for the shop."

And with so many different ventures, a typical day can take some interesting turns.

"I can switch from steaming milk to steaming a wedding dress in the same afternoon — and still have time to customize a Coffee Therapy cup or pour a homemade shop candle."

Her special talent, she jokes, might be "making a celebration feel personal, whether it's a Tuesday latte or a once-in-a-lifetime dress at Twin Oak Garden."

NEIGHBORS FIRST

After growing up here, building businesses here, and now raising the next generation here, Lyndsey remains passionate about the small businesses, families, and local connections that give a community its personality. "The more we know our neighbors, the stronger this community feels," she says.

That philosophy is reflected in the family motto Lyndsey chose, one that seems particularly fitting for the life she has built: "Create the place you wished this town had."

For Lyndsey, that means places to celebrate, gather, and connect. And after more than 25 years of photographing other people's stories, it seems only fitting to turn the camera around for a moment and share hers.

"If you live in Palm Grove or anywhere in South Daytona, thank you for supporting local. Come say hi at Coffee Therapy, Twin Oak Garden, or the boutique. We're your neighbors first, and we'd love to know your story too."

And if you see Lyndsey and her family around Pineapple Road? "Wave."

BUSINESS SPOTLIGHTS

Weddings, Photography & More

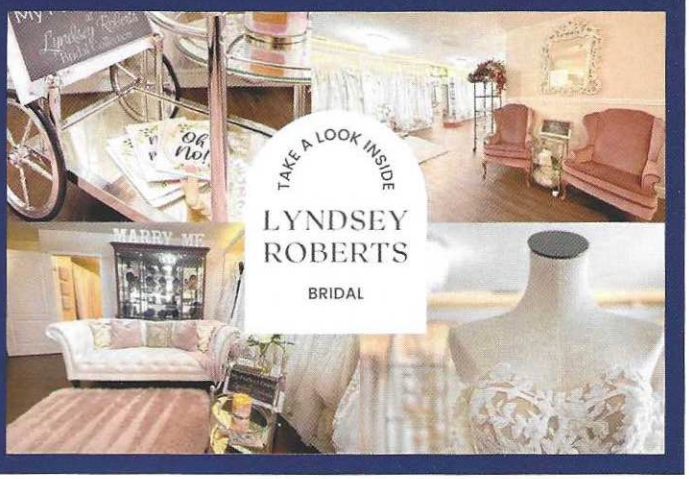

What began more than 25 years ago with photography has grown into a collection of businesses centered around life's biggest celebrations.

Twin Oak Garden is Lyndsey Roberts' modern farmhouse-style wedding and event venue in South Daytona, offering ceremony and reception spaces with romantic lighting, backdrops, and a variety of décor options.

Adjacent to the venue are Lyndsey Roberts Photography and Lyndsey Roberts Bridal Collection. The boutique offers wedding gowns, attire for bridesmaids, flower girls, and mothers, along with prom and other formal wear and in-house men's suit rentals. Lyndsey hand-selects gowns for the shop and also offers her own Bella Luso Bridal collection.

Together, the venue, photography, and bridal businesses bring Lyndsey's more than two decades of wedding experience together in one place.

When Lyndsey opened Coffee Therapy two years ago, she wanted to give South Daytona more than another place to grab a cup of coffee. The shop was designed as a neighborhood gathering place where people could meet, study, or work away from home. It has since welcomed Bible studies, PTA meetings, trivia nights, and other community gatherings.

Coffee Therapy also goes mobile with a refurbished vintage horse-trailer food truck that travels to local events throughout South Daytona and Port Orange.

It's another example of Lyndsey's family motto in action: "Create the place you wished this town had."

There is nothing like the JOY
of coming home.
